COURSE STRUCTURE:

There are three terms in one Academic Year.

- Term 1: September – December
- Term 2: January – March
- Term 3: April – June

Manner of Teaching

Besides traditional methods such as lectures, discussion strategies and demonstrations, there will also be Active Learning, Team-based learning, Discussion strategies, individual & group presentations, quizzes, project works, portfolios and case studies. Innovative learning methodologies such as metacognition and active learning will play a major role in teaching and learning process.

Metacognition describes the processes involved when students plan, monitor, evaluate and make changes to their own learning behaviours. The word ‘meta’ refers to higher order cognition about cognition, or ‘thinking about thinking’. Metacognition helps students become independent learners. It has a positive impact on learning, over and above the influence of intellectual ability.

Active learning fosters understanding which differs from rote learning facts. Students can apply this understanding to diverse contexts and problems. Active learning fosters students’ learning and their autonomy, giving them great involvement and control over their learning and gives them skills for lifelong learning.

Manner of Assessment

The course is assessed by end of the term assignments and / or take-home examination or closed-book examinations. Each unit is internally assessed and graded by qualified lecturers / Assessors and Internal Verifiers. Group assignments / projects with presentation will be presented to and assessed by a panel of experienced educators. Viva / individual interview will be conducted by Module teacher.

Term Assessments will be conducted for Term 1 and Term 2 and there will be a Final Year Assessment at the end of the Academic Year.
